

HOFFMANN'S TALES ARE TOLD AGAIN

Offenbach's Last Opera Heard
With Pleasure by Monday Evening Audience.

PERFORMANCE EXCELLENT

Hempel, Fremstad and Bori
Again an Interesting Trio of Prima Donnas.

The Offenbach's most ambitious work, "The Tales of Hoffmann," better known to musical lovers by its English title, "The Tales of Hoffmann," was presented in the regular repertoire of the Metropolitan Opera House at a matinee performance on Saturday, January 11. It was followed on the following Saturday evening by a special performance in honor of the French Hospital, which was crowned with the success of a Metropolitan season in the past.

This audience welcomed its performance with gratitude, for some of the most beautiful offerings have been made in the history of the opera. The combination of comedy, romance and tragedy, while the changing features of the opera help in preventing any feeling of monotony. It is not the least of the merits of the musical play that it is a masterpiece for three prima donnas. Mrs. Fremstad at one time in her career has been crowned with the success of all three of the soprano parts, while while such an arrangement would certainly have given scope for the versatility of the artist, the dramatic effect which is here not clannish, but added by the appearance of the different singers.

The unfortunate Hoffmann, who sits in the chair and tells to his listeners the three tales enacted in three acts of the opera, is the connecting link in the unification of the dramatic chain. He receives some help from his companion Niklash, who would receive even more from a friend of his sorrows more than from a friend.

The splendid artists of the Metropolitan are not the scenery, nor the men impersonators. The three prima donnas wear the laurels. Frieda Hempel as the automaton Olympia, Mrs. Fremstad as the wicked Venetian, and Lucie Bori as the victim of Dr. Miracle form a delightful trio of leading ladies.

The performance of last evening was more spirited than its predecessors in many places where they were weak. The second act failed at the first performance to attain its true importance because of the depression upon it by inadequate singing on the part of the soprano.

There was an improvement in this matter last evening, but it was not as great as it should have been. The artist respects the presentation of the opera was much the same as before, the excellence of Mr. Rother's direction was again a noteworthy feature.

The last act and Miss Bori again won a sympathy for the hapless Hoffmann. The choruses were excellent and the orchestra played well.

Those in the Audience.

There was a bright and dressy audience, the costumes being quite in keeping with such an opera. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll of Carroll, Md., the Brazilian Ambassador, Don Antonio da Gama, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Redmond, wearing white satin spangled with silver, and Mr. Richard S. Stevens, in a gown of white and gold, were with Mrs. Vanderbilt, who wore a black and white gown.

MRS. ORME WILSON'S TABLEAUX VIVANTS

Children Pose After the Old
Masters in Aid of Babies'
Ward.

FRESH SERIES TO-NIGHT

John W. Alexander Directs Entertainments, Which Will Net $3,000.

Children were the attraction in tableaux vivants yesterday afternoon at the house of Mrs. Orme Wilson, 3 East Sixty-fourth street, posing after the old masters for the support of district nurses of the babies' ward of the Post Graduate Hospital. To-night at Mrs. Wilson's house there will be another series of tableaux by older people and the sum of $3,000 will be netted by the two entertainments.

John W. Alexander posed the pictures and they followed a school rather than any set portraits of the famous masters. The colors of the original paintings being followed rather than familiar poses.

David Wagstaff, Jr., was seen in a Velasquez pose, and after the school of Sir Joshua Reynolds there posed Martha Koutz, Margaret Cobb, Alexandra Walker, Marjorie Ochs, Gloria Gould and Greenville Emmet, each in a separate pose. In the Hopper pictures there were Henry I. Cobb and Audrey Maynard, while for the only Nattier Miss Edith Gould, the biggest of all the children, posed.

The little ones behaved remarkably well, with only now and then movement to show that they were really live children. John Barnes Wells sang English ballads in the intermissions.

The pictures were shown in the ballroom of Mrs. Wilson's house and among those in the audience were Mrs. E. Henry Harriman, Mrs. Robert L. Gerry, Mrs. E. E. Gerry, the Misses Gerry, Mrs. Braxton Ives, Mrs. Walter Maynard, Mrs. Henry W. Munroe, Miss Louise Munroe, Mrs. Henry V. Poor, Mrs. William Mancke, Mrs. Edwin Gould, Mrs. C. Leidy Blair, Mrs. J. P.
